ENHANCE YOUR CURRICULUM WITH THE FINANCIAL TIMES

PROVIDE THE REAL-WORLD BUSINESS KNOWLEDGE AND GLOBAL OUTLOOK THAT TODAY’S STUDENTS NEED

enterprise.ft.com/education

75% of the world’s top 20 universities and 90% of the top 20 global MBA schools use the Financial Times to help them succeed.
The business world is changing beyond recognition. Over the last 20 years it's become more knowledge-based, more dependent on technology and crucially, far more global.

In recent times, the education sector has also needed to evolve in order to keep up with the accelerated pace of change, much of this, anticipated by the demands of businesses and students in a post-COVID world. Whilst change was already in the midst, recent global events have clearly expedited this.

Companies today want employees with an international outlook, an understanding of real-world business and an informed approach to problem solving. And business students want a modern, high quality education that will prepare them for the transition into this new world.

The future of institutional business education is already pressured by a multitude of factors. From everchanging student expectations, rival courses and hybrid study opportunities to rising tuition costs; institutions that aren’t adapting their programmes are in danger of becoming obsolete.

Two-thirds of the members of the Accreditation Council for Business Schools and Programs (ACBSP) said they expected more business school closures in the next 10 years.

Schools such as McGill University in Canada, Singapore Management University and ESSEC Business School in France, have told us at length how they have made the shift to meet the demand for real-world material, blended learning and a global outlook with help from the FT.

So, how do your institution, academic staff and students benefit from adopting this approach?

If you’re going to teach the students from a world perspective, you need a world newspaper.

Robert Weiner, Professor, George Washington University
THE BENEFITS OF GLOBAL, REAL-WORLD, BLENDED LEARNING

Traditional business education has focused on classroom group teaching, established subjects, long-standing case studies and an emphasis on theory.

But now, you can stand out with personalised engaging teaching, blended learning, flexible multi-device access to materials, current relevant case studies and context that links theory to the real world of business.

Academic staff can:

- Give students a richer learning experience that helps them achieve better results.
- Enable students to learn in the ways and at the times that suit them best.
- Back up their points effectively by grounding them in current business realities.

Students can:

- Get a better grasp of business theories in the context of real-world global news and events.
- Learn in the ways that work best for them, accessing what they need, whenever they need it.
- Sharpen their commercial skills, stand out in interviews and gain an edge in the job market.

Academic institutions can:

- Increase student satisfaction, exam grades and employment success.
- Enhance their reputation for providing programmes of real value with an international outlook.
- Attract more of the world’s best students.

I often read FT.com, since its news coverage offers an excellent overview about the relevant current economic events as well as the latest business trends. I regularly use the articles to apply practical examples to my lectures which illustrate the theory. study is because they will get an international outlook.

Martin Fassnacht
WHU – Otto Beisheim School of Management

enterprise.ft.com/education
ENGAGE YOUR STUDENTS IN AN INTERNATIONAL MINDSET

75% of the world’s top 20 universities and 90% of the top 20 global MBA schools are now using the Financial Times as a valuable multimedia teaching resource.

Top institutions provide high quality business education with help from the Financial Times.

As one of the world’s leading news organisations, the FT is recognised internationally for its authority, integrity and accuracy.

The FT’s education programme is designed specifically for business schools and universities. It’s a practical way to bring current affairs and an international perspective into your curriculum – helping to enhance your school’s reputation, attract the best students and improve their career prospects.

How it works:

The FT publishes award-winning global news and analysis on world affairs, business, finance and politics – supporting a wide range of studies from accounting and economics to international relations and management.

An FT Group Subscription gives you unlimited access to this multimedia content – helping students to connect classroom theory to business practice, develop a global outlook and build the skills employers are looking for.

It also enables you to offer blended learning through its digital tools and integration with learning management systems such as Moodle, Canvas and Blackboard – helping to create an easy and enjoyable experience for both students and staff.

Jochen Wirtz, Ph.D.
Professor of Marketing & Academic Director,
UCLA-NUS EMBA

We love the global perspective of the FT coverage. This is something that is very close to the heart of our UCLA-NUS Executive MBA – extraordinary international experience.

Professor Victor Abraham
California State University

enterprise.ft.com/education
FULLY TAILORED TO YOUR NEEDS

Our Customer Success Managers work with your librarian or administrators to identify the most useful topics and themes for you. They then match the content to your preferred platform and deliver it using the technologies that suit you best.

FT integration into your learning management systems provides a quick, convenient way for staff and students to keep up with the information they need. For example, you can create a customised list of headlines or news widgets for a course and display the relevant content with your Moodle, Canvas, Blackboard or any other learning management system.

Single Sign-On login gives users fast, frictionless access on all their devices, while our suite of administration tools make subscription management easy and efficient. This flexible access encourages regular FT reading, which has been linked to increased likelihood of improved academic performance.

From the very first trimester, we were urged to read the Financial Times on a daily basis. With FT news by email at my fingertips, I can keep abreast of world news and business trends, which has proven to be invaluable in a global economy.

Jacinth Au
Thunderbird School of Global Management, Executive MBA student

PROVIDE RELEVANT, HIGH VALUE CONTENT
- Deliver market-leading news and analysis across your institution
- Personalise newsfeeds, widgets and headlines, providing practical and relevant insight into course topics
- Increase likelihood of improved academic performance by placing theoretical learning in the context of business or market realities

YOU AND YOUR STUDENTS CAN ALSO
- Read FT news and analysis wherever you are, with unlimited mobile and tablet access
- Research businesses, topics and career paths, setting alerts for specific companies and industries of interest
- Keep track of your own choice of topics, with all relevant new stories appearing in your personalised news hub or as tailored email digests
- Create and share reading lists with just a couple of clicks
- Take advantage of FT charts and interactive graphics to illustrate complex data and trends

enterprise.ft.com/education
REAL WORLD CONTENT AND USEFUL TOOLS

Through articles, blogs, videos and podcasts, the FT provides the global education community with authoritative news, analysis and comment, as well as powerful research and business tools.

Weekly business school newsletter
View up-to-date management insights, picks of the most relevant FT articles from leading professors, and the latest in business education.

Editorial newsletters
Pick from a wide range of other daily and weekly newsletters which provide specialist analysis and selections of further reading.

myFT, email digests and tailored reading lists
Keep track of your own choice of topics, with all relevant new stories appearing in your personalised news hub or as tailored email digests.

Special Reports
Save time on research and get valuable insights, with an online library of reports on countries, industries and business topics.

Video & Audio
Bring global stories to life, with analysis and comment from FT journalists and exclusive interviews with business leaders.

Interactive charts
Take advantage of FT charts and interactive graphics to illustrate complex data and trends.

The FT App
Read FT news and analysis wherever you are, with unlimited mobile and tablet access.

Archive
Research any topic and create tailored case studies by tracing the evolution of company fortunes, business trends and thinking.

Business theory isn’t enough. Our students ultimately need to operate as effective business people, communicating well with colleagues and clients. So they need to be able to relate what they learn to real life, build a global awareness and stay on top of current events.

Professor Scott Moeller
The Business School, London
A RANGE OF ENGAGING, INSPIRING TOPICS

On FT.com, your students can easily research thousands of topics, businesses and career paths, setting alerts for specific companies and industries of interest.

- International Business
  Coverage of international business from company takeovers, to battles between business and government.

- Economics
  The macroeconomic and geopolitical issues affecting the global economy, featuring expert columnists like Martin Wolf.

- Finance
  News from the global financial markets, investing and international capital market activity.

- Management
  Stimulating coverage of core business issues and the latest trends in management thinking and practice.

- Business Education
  Comprehensive rankings of business programmes and schools.

- Politics & International Relations
  Coverage of election campaigns, political issues and the impact of political decisions on the world.

---

The FT has really helped a lot with my interview preparation... the ‘Markets’ section really helped me broaden my analysis when faced with tough interview questions about current affairs.

Tan Yu Jing
Singapore Management University Student, Now Fx Options Trader at BNP Paribas

---

The FT teaches life lessons between classes, business students become scrutinous with the facts and diligent with their views.

Gregor Halff
Associate Dean and Academic Director of MBA/EMBA, Singapore Management University
THE FT’S EDUCATION PRICING MODEL

Our pricing model is tailored to meet the needs of universities and business schools, and has been refined in recent years in response to feedback from our education customers. We offer all academic institutions a 67.5% discount per reader and there are four scenarios which determine the price.

Business school only
For business schools who want to provide access to postgraduate business school students. The price is based on 15% of students studying a business related postgraduate course.

University only
For universities who want to provide access to all undergraduates and faculty excluding their business school. Pricing is based on the total number of students and faculty.

Business school + University
For universities who want to provide access to all undergraduates and faculty including their business school. Pricing is calculated based on 25% of students and faculty and 15% of postgraduate business school students.

Small group
For universities or business schools who only want to provide access to a defined number of students and/or faculty. The price is based on the number of individuals requiring access.

Compete more effectively in business education

Three-quarters of the world’s top 20 universities and 90% of the top 20 global MBA schools are now using the Financial Times as a valuable, multimedia teaching resource.

To find out how you can join them with an FT Group Subscription, contact us today at enterprise.ft.com/education

We chose the FT because it’s a reliable international news source that offers the global perspective our students need. I want my students to understand the need to stay informed on current events, and the best way they can do this is by reading the FT.

Dr. Roe Goddard
Professor of Global Political Economy Thunderbird School of Global Management

enterprise.ft.com/education
About the Financial Times

The FT offers a practical way for educational institutions to incorporate current affairs and an international perspective into their curriculums, bridging the gap between theory and reality.

To find out more about an FT Group Subscription, visit enterprise.ft.com/education